Road to Reading

What is the Road to Reading?
The Road to Reading is a 10-week pledge to read for 30 minutes every week.

Who is the Road to Reading for?
Everyone! Whether you read every day or haven’t read in a long time, you can take part.

Where can I sign up?
You can sign up at any time at worldbooknight.org.

How do I track my reading?
You can track your reading using the road map at worldbooknight.org/resources. Print this out and cross off a checkpoint each week, or save it to your phone, tablet, or computer to cross them off digitally.

I don’t think I can read for 30 minutes in one go!
Don’t worry, you can spread your 30 minutes over the week. Try 15 minutes while you’re on the bus, or 10 minutes before bed. An audiobook also counts, so put on one in the car, or while you’re making dinner.

What should I read?
You can read anything you want. It can be a book, poetry, a graphic novel, newspaper or magazine. You can also listen to an audiobook. If you need a suggestion, go to worldbooknight.org to see our recommended reads!

I haven’t read for a long time and I’m worried about getting started
We’re here to help you along the way. If you sign up through worldbooknight.org, you’ll be sent regular tips, reminders and advice to support your reading.

Will I be doing it alone?
People across the country are taking part in the Road to Reading, and you’re part of this community. You can also use the social media assets at worldbooknight.org/resources to share your experience online.

Why should I do the Road to Reading?
Reading is proven to have lots of benefits; on health and wellbeing, life skills and social connection. You can feel these benefits with just 30 minutes of reading each week.
